Ira Barnes

James Barnes was born probably in the year 1758 or 1759 in the State of Pennsylvania and enlisted from that state in the U.S. Army to fight for American Independence in the Revolutionary war.

After the war he returned to his native state and got married and had two boys, David Barnes and Jonathan Barnes.

His wife died and he then married Miss Susanna Baker.

Their children:

Ira Barnes, born August 12, 1793.

Susan Barnes, born November 21, 1795.

Weltha Barnes, probably born, 1797.

Hiram Barnes, born in 1801.

Elsie Barnes, probably born in 1804.

Barnes, probably born in 1806.

James Barnes bound his son Ira to a Mr. Sheppard Pierce to work for him until he was 21 years old and was to receive at that time $100.00 and a horse.

James Barnes moved his family (except Ira) to Livingston County, New York State, where he died.

Mrs. Barnes, finding it was impossible to support her family, was compelled to withdraw her son Ira from the services of Mr. Pierce, to help her support the family. As Ira did not serve all his time out Mr. Pierce refused to give him any pay for his former services.

Mrs. Barnes lived at or near Avon Springs, N.Y., where her oldest daughter Susan married Richard Wadsworth, June (continued to page - 2 -)

16, 1814. She moved her family to Mustcash, Ohio in about the year 1820.

Her daughter Weltha married Dr. S. Carpenter, of Castalia, Ohio, and her daughter Elsie married Moses George, of York Township, Sandusky County, Ohio. She and her youngest daughter Matilda moved back to the State of New York where she died and her daughter married John T. James. They lived and died in Newfield, N.Y. Their children:

Fernando James

Anionette James

Frank E. James. They are all dead.

Frank E. James died at the Soldiers' Home at Bath, N.Y., in 1912.

Fernando James died at his home July 14, 1904. His daughter, Miss Margaret E. James is a stenographer in an office at 29 Broadway, N.Y.

Ira Barnes, son of James and Susanna Barnes, married Eunice Tuttle, March 20, 1814, who was born in Pennsylvania, June 24, 1793.

Ira Barnes and his wife Eunice Barnes were engaged in farming on the Genesee Flats of the Genesee river in Livingston County, N.Y. In 1816 there was high water in the river and overflowed the land he worked. He lost nearly all his crop, and determined then to go West to the Fire Lands in Ohio and make his home there. He moved to Mustcash the next year, 1817, overland with a team of three horses.

He took with him his family and his sister-in-law Maria Haskin, then a little girl.

As it is usually the lot of the pioneer, when they had raised a crop of wheat or oats, there were no threshing machinery to thresh it. Threshing with a flail was the usual way.

A flail is made by tying a club about two or two and one-half feet long to a handle about five feet long, usually made of hickory. Another way they used to thresh out the grain was with their feet stepping on it. Ira Barnes invented and made a threshing machine of his own, by taking a log about 22-inches to 24-inches in diameter and about six or seven feet long, hewing (continued to page - 3 -) one end down to six or eight inches in diameter and leaving the other end the full size, then tapering it from end to end on a true taper, boring many holes in it and driving stout wooden pins in it, then fastening the small end to the middle of the threshing floor with a swivel, then hitching a team on it and rolling it over the bundles of grain. The weight of the log resting on the pins would thresh out the grain.

He was very handy with carpenter and blacksmith tools. He built a shop and put in a forge and done all his own blacksmithing and working some for his neighbors.

He sold his home in Mustcash about 1860 or 1861, and moved to Blue Mounds, Wisconsin, and from there to Iowa, where they both died. They were both consistent members of the M.E. Church and he was for many years a class leader.

He used to say he thought the grass grew better in pasture where a Methodist Circuit Preacher's horse had rolled. He died in Iowa, October 15, 1875. His wife Eunice died there also, June 22, 1895.

Children of Ira and Eunice Barnes:

James Barnes, born in Livingston County, N.Y., about 1814.

Richard Wadsworth Sr., was the owner of the springs that gave the name to the village of Avon Springs, N.Y. It was a sulphur spring in a cedar swamp which made of it a summer resort and sanitarium where many were cured of rheumatism and other diseases.

He built a sanitarium and bathhouse by the springs and he and his family kept it for many years where people came from far and near to take the baths and receive the treatment.

The time finally came in 1837, when he wanted more land (continued to page - 19 -)

(continued from page 17) for his large and growing family. He had a chance to sell his property there and sold it and took the proceeds to Mustcash, Ohio, and bought a large tract of land there adjoining Sanducky bay. His wife Susan wanted him to buy land near Bellevue, Ohio, but the navigation of the bay and the fishing industry in the bay and the beautiful waters there captivated him and he decided to buy the land and make his home near it.

He bought the land of Mr. Whitmore, the father of the late John Whitmore, that was so well known and lived so many years in Townsend Township, Sandusky County, Ohio.

The land had but little improvements on it at that time.

He built a large and beautiful frame house and a large hay barn and a horse barn. The dressed lumber was all planed by hand and the doors and window sash and the moulding were also made by hand.

He also built a sail boat and named it "Grace Amelia" and his oldest son Richard, Jr., sailed it on the lakes.

He finally sold it to Jacob Grow of Venice, Ohio, who sent Thomas Campbell and others to Mustcash to get it and take it to Venice on a stormy day in November, about 1847. Cambell was swept overboard on the voyage and drowned. The others on board took her to Venice and landed safely.

Mr. Wadsworth fished on Willow Point in Sandusky bay for many years.

He hauled seine that was from 75 to 100 rods long and sometimes made the business very profitable.

Many farmers living away from the bay would come to Willow Point to buy some fresh fish in the spring during the fishing season and some of them would bring maple sugar, smoked hams and bacon to exchange for fish.

Mr. Wadsworth was a temperate man and took an interest in the temperance cause in his neighborhood and set a good example for his sons who did not fail to follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth lived many years in their home on their farm to enjoy the peaceful fruits of their labor.

He died May 4, 1850, aged about 66 years. She died April 6, 1854, aged 58 years, 4 months and 15 days.

LEVI PRENTICE

Mannasseh Prentice, father of Levi Prentice, was born at Preston, Conn., November 25, 1778. He married Susan Lathrop, of Lisbon county, Conn., about the year 1800 and moved to Cazenovia, Tompkins county, N.Y., the same year.

He was a captain of New York State Militia in the war of 1812, and died while in the service of his country of campfever in 1814 at Sackets Harbor, N.Y.

Levi Prentice, son of Mannasseh and Susan Prentice, was born May 18, 1801, in Cazenovia, N.Y., and came to Ohio with Dr. Tilden in 1817 and married Mary Hartwell, October 13, 1824, who was born in Clarksfield, Canada, East, April 8, 1808.

They began housekeeping in a log house that stood on or near the spot where the Thos. Neill House now stands, in Mustcash.

They made a business of raising cattle and horses and fishing in Sandusky bay on Willow Point. Game of all kinds that was natural to northern Ohio was plentiful in Mustcash at that time. Deer often went in droves of twenty or twenty-five head and wild turkeys were also plentiful.

Mr. Prentice spent but little time hunting. He would occasionally kill a deer when they were handy.

There was very little land cleared and fenced at that time. Cold Creek Prairie and Neill's Prairie were unfenced and commons, where stock could graze from early spring until late in the fall and sometimes nearly all winter.

The same prairie afforded good wild grass that they mowed with scythes and made into hay and stocked on the ground for (continued to page - 36 -) the purpose of feeding their stock in winter, always plowing a circle around the hay stacks, fourteen or fifteen furrows wide as a protection against the prairie fires that swept the prairies every fall.

At that time fish were plentiful in Sandusky bay; they fished with a seine only about twenty-five rods long and would sometimes catch one thousand pounds of fish at one haul.

There was scarcely any sale for fresh fish at that time so they salted them in kegs holding about 100 pounds each and sold them to merchants in Sandusky.

At one time there was dull sale for fish in Sandusky so Mr. Prentice concluded to try selling them to people living back in the country away from the lake where he found better sales.

There were no railroads in Ohio at that time so he hauled his fish with team and wagon.

At one time he found rather slow sale for fish and he had a chance to trade his load for wooden clocks. He did so and found good sale for the clocks among his neighbors at home.

This is the way Mr. Prentice got a start at raising cattle: He hired the late Samuel H. Smith, of Castalia, Ohio, who was than a lad sixteen or seventeen years old, to go with him to the Darby Plains, near Springfield, O., where they bought twenty-five or thirty head of calves and drove them to his home in Mustcash. One of them being poor and weak, gave out in crossing Cold Creek Prairie. It being late in the afternoon they were obliged to leave it there over night. The next morning when they went back to look after it they found it had been devoured by the wolves in the night.

They made the trip both ways on foot. His money being all silver, made them quite a load which they took turns in carrying.

There were roving bands of Indians at that time that occasionally passed through the neighborhood.

On one occasion, when Mrs. Prentice had been married but a short time, she rode a horse back to her father's home near the Seven-miles House and returned late in the afternoon. To her surprise and horror, when opening the door of her home, (continued to page - 37 -) she saw eight or ten Indians laying in a semi-circle on the floor before the fireplace. One of their number could speak a few words of English who assured her they were good Indians, and would do her no harm, but wanted something to eat. She got them some supper after which they all took their leave.

Mustcash was so-called from an incident that happened in a store kept many years ago by a Frenchman on the point of land that extends into Sandusky bay on the south shore. Said store was patronized mostly by Indians who traded their furs for blankets, whiskey and other articles that Indians use, when, once upon a time, an Indian brought his furs to sell to the Frenchman for cash instead of trade in return for his furs, the Frenchman tried to persuade the Indian to take the goods instead of cash, but the Indian who had an eye for business and an ear for music, could speak but few words of English. He stoutly refused to take goods in trade and said Must-Cash, Must-Cash. After that incident the point of land was called Mustcash Point and the name gradually and naturally extended back to the neighborhood on the main land and was called Mustcash Point for many years, and gradually the word point was left off and it was called Mustcash.

It was not unlike that of the village of Castalia. It was first called "The Head of Cold Creek," then after a while the word Cold was left off and called "The Head of the Creek"; then after a while again the words "Head of" was dropped and it was called The Creek thereafter until changed to Castalia in about 1843 or 1844.

Levi Prentice died April 12, 1834, aged 32 years, 10 months and 24 days. Mary Hartwell Prentice Barnes died March 8, 1872, aged 63 years, 11 months. Their children:
